As some of you have seen from other posts, I buy and sell machines. I am getting a masters degree and can't take on too much work outside of my studies, and so phonographs are a source of income. I am putting out feelers for offers on my Mark IX EMG gramophone. As much as I would like to keep it, its financially irresponsible for me at the moment, so I am going to see what folks may be willing to offer. This machine is very uncommon here in the USA so I am asking for offers over setting a price because I frankly don't know what its worth here. The horn has a sag, as seen in the pictures in the long thread in the main discussion section. See that post for pictures. The case is in great shape with only a few slight defects, the interior is excellent and I added new gaskets to the soundbox. It does sound AMAZING. Its electric too. I am not going to ship the machine, so it would be pick up only. I have had plenty of shipping experience so its not about the feasibility of this, but I am not willing to risk this pieces safety at all. I live in NYC, I don't own a car. Exceptional trade offers may be considered. After all, I am still a collector and can't shake the bug, so if you have something very unusual or equally as rare (horn machine) let me know. Although I probably shouldn't!
